LBCC Business Instructor Named NBEA Postsecondary Teacher of the Year

LBCC Business instructor Mary Ann Lammers recently received the Postsecondary Teacher of the Year Award from the National Business Education Association.

Lammers has been teaching business technology classes at LBCC for 25 years. Her work at the college has resulted in the business technology programs being recognized as some of the best in the country.

Lammers is active in her state, regional, and national business education teacher associations having served as president of OBEA, WBEA, and NBEA. She is currently Consultant and Past-President of the Oregon Business Education Association, is Director of the WBEA Professional Development Institute, and serves as the Western Region representative on the NBEA Strategic Planning Committee and the International Society for Business Education Board. She is an NBEA representative to the National Policies Commission for Business and Economic Education, where she is currently serving as chair.

Lammers has a bachelor of science degree in commerce from Montana State University and a master of science in business education from Utah State University.
